Romance Musical Concludes Y Run

A triangular love affair, comedy, and escapades of the Robin Hood of Morocco have made the musical play "Desert Song" an international favorite.

The set was designed by Charles Hansen; Dr. Harold L. Hansen is the stage director.

The BYU Opera Workshop presentation of the famous operetta will conclude its three-day run in the de Jong Concert Hall of the Harris Fine Arts Bldg. today and Friday at 8:15 p.m.

ON SALE

Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Bldg. ticket office from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Directed by Dr. Don L. Earl the musical is filled with several long-standing popular songs such as "Romance," "Blue Heaven," "One Alone" and "The French Military Marching Song."

The music was composed by Sigmund Romberg, the dialogue written by Oscar Hammerstein and Otto Harbach and updated by Frank Mandel.

LOVE PLOT

The plot centers around Margot (played by Kerril Sue Rollins) who has followed her fiancé Capt. Fontaine (Gaylin Thomas) to Morocco where he has been called to put an end to the Red Shadow, the Moroccan Robin Hood who is also the leader of the Rifis, an Arab tribe.

The Red Shadow (portrayed by Terry Balsler, is also in love with Margot and abducts her from General Birabeau's (Keith Stewart) palace along with Bennie (Neal Barber), society correspondent for the Paris Daily Mail, and Susan (Syd Samuelson), his secretary.

The group will sing a Jewish hymn and Robert Downs of the BYU music faculty will sing "The Holy City."

Taking part in the assembly will be Nelson Carter, Johnny Hansen, David Lauritzen, Robert Bailey, Rhonda Nanney, Kathy Truman, Liz Allen, Mary Demshier and Mrs. Luene Ladlow, wife of tour director Daniel J. Ladlow.

The popular 3-D's and Terry Sisters will present a concert Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Wilkinson Center ballroom.

Tickets are available at the third floor ticket office for $1.25 per person.

Since getting together in the Program Bureau during their undergraduate days at BYU, the 3-D's (Dick, Duane and Dennis) have gone on to record several albums and entertain in many parts of the world.

They have always been well received at their alma mater.

The Terry Sisters began their singing career at ages four and six while living in St. George, Utah.

IN DEMAND

Tutored and encouraged by their mother, their talents blossomed and they were soon in demand at gatherings of all types.

The sisters—Becky and Carlan—now live in Murray and have continued their rise to stardom.

Now 20 and 18 years old, the duo has sung at nearly every state fair in the Western U.S., including appearances with the Lennon Sisters, Paul Winchell, Rouvaum and the Dave Clark Five.

The girls have two record releases and their act includes a variety of popular songs, original numbers and impersonations.

OOOOOOOOH!

... The 3-D's and the Terry Sisters join forces during an entertainment number and their expressions display their vibrance and enthusiasm on stage.

Mott Foundation Grants $65,000

A grant of $65,000 has been awarded to BYU from the Mott Foundation to assist with the establishment of a Regional Community School program, it was announced by President Ernest L. Wilkinson.

Dr. Israel Heaton, professor of recreation education at BYU, was instrumental in obtaining the funds and will be regional center director to initiate the operation. He has studied the Mott Program in Flint, Mich. on several occasions, having just recently returned from a six-week internship there.

RED SCHOOLHOUSE

"The Community School concept is reminiscent of the little red schoolhouse," Dr. Heaton said. "The town school was the center of activity and every citizen knew it was his. It was used not only for class instruction during the day, but also for political meetings on how to beat the drought or get a stage line."

He explained the community school idea is more than an adult education program. It considers the schools as continuously available centers from early morning until late evening six days a week and 52 weeks a year for whatever purpose the community needs.

PUBLIC USE

"The schools belong to the public, and the people should have the opportunity to use the facilities," he asserted. "To use these expensive buildings from only 8 or 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. is not only a poor investment but also a block to community development."

The Mott Foundation was established in 1926 by Charles Stewart Mott, then vice-president of General Motors Corp., primarily for the purpose of stimulating such programs.

With this grant BYU will become a Regional Center with a director to conduct training programs for community leaders, public school personnel and community school directors from Utah and other states. Four members of the BYU faculty have had training with the Mott Foundation in Flint.

TRAINING PROGRAM

The director also will seek to incorporate the community school philosophy in the training of teachers in the colleges and universities of the state and serve as consultant to the State Department of Education which is vitally interested in developing Community Schools in Utah.

Many Utah school districts and the State Office also have sent representatives to workshops in Flint, Mich. and it is expected that all 40 school districts in the state will be seeking the services of the University as they start similar programs.

Dr. Heaton said an imaginative community school director (usually a part-time teacher or administrator) in each city will be the key to the program. He will arouse the people to solve their own problems and develop their own programs to fill their individual needs through use of the schools.

The Provo City School District, which has been pioneering this program in Utah, will serve as the demonstration center for community schools in action.

EXPAND EDUCATION

Some of the immediate changes which should be brought about include improving recreation programs for all ages after school, evenings, weekends, and during the summer; development programs to bring the family closer together; expanding the adult education program; and activities to meet the demands of the rapidly increasing number of senior citizens.

Also helping potential school dropouts; providing opportunities for gifted students and citizens to development talents and perform more extensively; opening of neighborhood libraries; involving neighbors to use the school to work out their problems (delinquency, crime, health, cleanup campaign, educational failures, prejudices, etc.).

Dr. Heaton said the pilot program in Flint now involves 90,000 children and adults each year, winter and summer. It has branched out to include boys camps, big brother help for boys, children's health centers, leadership training, Stepping Stone programs for girls, committee on alcoholism, etc.

Dress... A Standard?

A great deal has been said about dress standards and styles on our campus. From the earliest literature mailed to prospective students to the almost dressy-dress exhibited at football games BYU is seen as one of the dressiest and clothes conscious campuses in the country.

The interesting thing is that taste and propriety are emphasized more than cost or far-out styling. This makes it relatively easy for students to dress appropriately on fairly modest budgets if care and foresight are exercised.

Generally speaking students are to be commended for the high standards of dress and behavior that they set and maintain for themselves. This is even more impressive when consideration is given to the fickle and often fleeting nature of fashion.

Often the accuracy with which an individual gauges the propriety of his dress or behavior is a reflection of his maturity and socialization.

On our campus we have an extremely wide range of maturity, age, and social customs. There are further compounded by a multitude of diverse activities—often occurring simultaneously. This makes it extremely difficult to establish hard, fast rules governing dress and certain types of behavior.

In the past efforts to closely regulate dress have met with considerable difficulty and in some cases direct opposition.

Rules governing skirt lengths fall allow for the fact that the university store could sell very few if any dresses, skirts that would comply with the Worst of all, visitors unaware of the rules covering dress were frequently embarrassed by those attempting to force them.

Today the majority of students on campus are seen modestly attired in clothes which reflect good taste. This is even significant in view of the warm summer temperatures and extreme fashions of day.

A few still display immaturity and undue attention to themselves by attending classes inappropriately attired but number gets smaller as the semester wears on.

If we, both singularly and collectively, stress modesty, propriety, and good character and then assume responsibility for our behavior then we can assume that we see on campus are either attired properly for the activity they are engaged in or are visiting our campus and are not aware of our standards.

In the final analysis we must never sight of the fact that what a man is more important than what a man wears... but one is often reflected in the other.

Golightly Featured At Confab

Presiding at the tenth annual convention of the National Federation of State Poetry Societies recently, Dr. Max Golightly set an optimistic tone when he spoke to some 400 delegates from 26 states on the campus of Central State College in Edmond, Okla.

"As poets, we want to cry too much—groat 'too much'—the author and professor of drama said, "We forget about the beauty in life."

He urged the poets to offer more inspiration, to make way for the faults of others—through love—and to search for hope in a world that sometimes seems to lack hope.

"The idea of the convention," commented Dr. Golightly, "is to accentuate the affirmative in our society."

Golightly, who has served as president of the National Federation of State Poetry Societies, is now serving as first vice-president in an honorary capacity.

He received the First Prize Publication award from the Federation for his book of poems titled Ibid.

He received the Clara Laster Lamp of Learning Award for 1967 and has won several other prizes as a writer and poet. He is listed in the National Who's Who biography published in London.

Student Authors Return From North

By Ann Nichols
Special to the Universe

BYU advanced writing students said goodbye to "Operation Midnight Sun" last weekend after completing a 4800-mile trek through beautiful Southeast Alaska.

Under the direction of national magazine writer Herbert E. McLean, students interviewed and took pictures for stories dealing with such diverse topics as totemic art, commercial fishing, outdoor camping and cooking, bush pilots, native policemen, and funeral directors.

The students will now submit articles about the trip to national magazines.

PRactical EXPERIENCE

The practical writing experience is unique among colleges and universities.

Instead of the typical classroom, McLean lectured his students aboard the Alaska Marine Highway ferry, around the table in his camper, on the beach of a deserted island in Glacier Bay, or under the protective cover of a tent.

But McLean believes the real value in education comes from actual experience.

OIL, NOT SUN

Students often took advantage of Alaska's midnight sun, working into the night to finish a story—only to have the director comment, "This trip should be called 'Operation Midnight Oil'!" The oil began burning in Ketchikan, Alaska, where Doug McKinlay did stories on a Roudy Bay boat trip, the local fire department and the Forest Service Navy. Lee Nelson interviewed a sporting goods dealer and flew to Humpback Lake for a fishing story.

Next stop was the tiny fishing town, Wrangell, where Anita Evenson visited a school for native children while Jen Bowen worked on the local newspaper.

In Petersburg, Cliff Kerr interviewed several officials on Alaska's steep fish passes. Ann Nichols researched the 1915 escapades of murderer Ed Krause.

MEET GOVERNOR

Alaska's capital city, Juneau, was the last major city for the energetic free lance writers. Briefings were held with many state officials and an Operation Midnight Sun certificate of merit was presented to Governor Walter J. Hickel.

Before heading their auto caravan home, the group chartered a boat and ventured into the remote reaches of Glacier Bay, where 22 major glaciers empty into an arm of the Inside Passage.

FIFTY STORIES

McLean estimates that the number of student stories produced from the trip will total over 50.

"We designed this experience to stimulate interest in magazine writing as a worthwhile, profitable profession—and to provide a rich, natural locale for our work," McLean said. "I couldn't be more pleased with the results thus far."
